

ECON 313: Economics of Growth & Development

Theories of economic growth and economic development. Application of these theories as well as considerations of evolving economic ideas to the study of local, national, regional, and global institutions in the formation of perspectives and policies relating to trade, poverty, education, and the environment. This course satisfies the proficiency requirement for Oral Communication in the disciplines.

Credits: 3

Prerequisites:

151 and 152.

Program: Economics