MATH 440 : Mathematical Modeling

Applications of mathematics to a wide variety of problems inherent in a technological society. Emphasis may vary among applications to physical, biological, and environmental systems or linear programming, queueing theory, Markov processes, and other problems of systems engineering. Emphasis on constructing mathematical interpretations of such problems.
Semester Hours 3.0
Prerequisites
MATH 321 and 360.